

The plot is located in the Gazipaşa district on the Mediterranean coast and is directly connected to the seafront. The region stretches along the coastline, with the Taurus Mountains rising in the background.

The area is historically rich, featuring ancient settlements and archaeological sites dating back to antiquity.

As a tourism zone, it holds the character of an "emerging" destination; it is not yet overdeveloped like neighboring Alanya, which offers a significant advantage in terms of potential.

NATURE AND CULTURE

The plot is located in the Gazipaşa district on the Mediterranean coast and directly faces the sea. The region stretches along the coastline, with the Taurus Mountains rising in the background.

The area is historically rich; for instance, it features ancient settlements and archaeological sites dating back to antiquity.

As a tourism zone, it characteristically serves as an "up-and-coming" destination. It is not yet overdeveloped or crowded like neighboring Alanya, which offers a distinct advantage in terms of potential.

IDENTITY AND VALUES

Economically, the region is oriented toward agriculture (particularly greenhouse farming and tropical fruits) and tourism.

For tourism or a resort/hotel project, a plot of this nature offers strong advantages, including a seafront location, scenic views, and transport connectivity.

In terms of establishing a "unique identity" for the project design, the local agricultural culture, marine-coastal character, and natural texture can be utilized as central themes.

Climate

The region falls under the semi-humid climate classification, characterized by hot, dry summers and mild, wetter winters.

Sun

Morning: Rises from the east, over the sea. East-facing rooms enjoy sunny mornings and sea views.

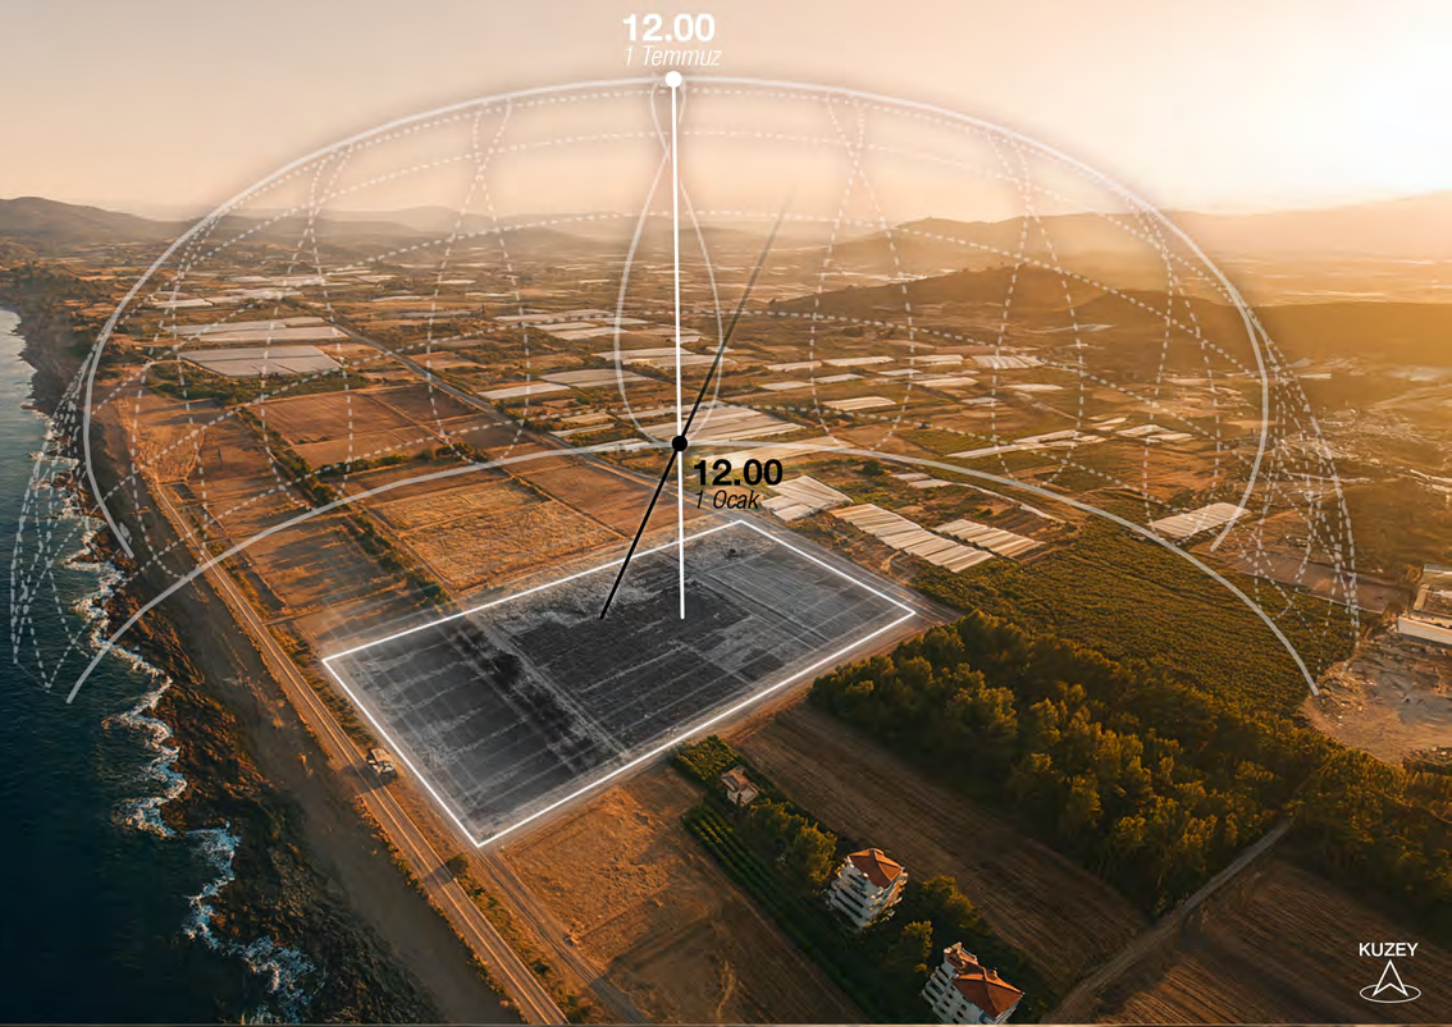

Noon–Afternoon: Comes from the southwest, making shading important on southern facades.

Evening: Sets in the west over the sea, giving west-facing social areas a high value for sunset viewing.

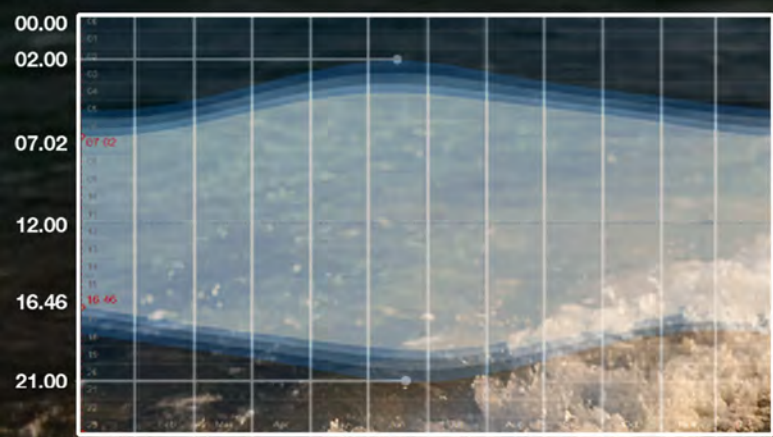

Wind

Summer: Generally a south-southwest sea breeze, which strengthens in the afternoon.

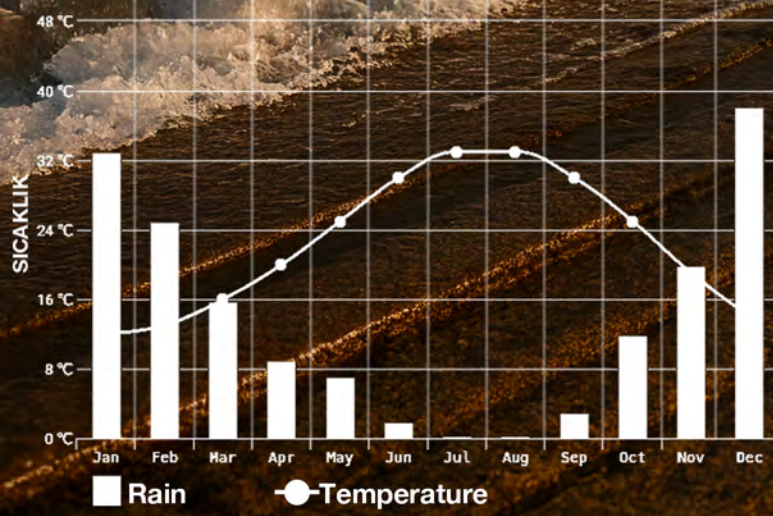

Winter: North/northeast land winds are dominant; accommodation blocks must be protected against the north wind.

Gazipaşa's tropical climate turns high-value agricultural products (chiefly bananas, alongside avocados, mangoes, dragon fruit, and passion fruit) into the region's primary economic engine.

← Alongside Antalya's extraordinary biodiversity, which hosts over a thousand endemic species, Gazipaşa remains a terrain that is still being discovered botanically, thanks to its own unique variety of endemic plants.
